

The Last Original Space in Portland

Imagine having your wedding in a space that didn't look like the wedding before. You can transform Castaway to exactly the way you want it. Couples have created original wedding receptions complete with custom lighting, live music and even fire-eaters. It's truly one of the last original spaces in Portland.

Castaway is over 10,000 square feet of open space and located at the edge of the Pearl District nestled near the Willamette River. Built in 1929 as a smelting and refining warehouse, this marvel features original wrap-around steel sash pane windows, 14 foot ceilings with exposed beams and an outside patio.

A complete ground up restoration added polished concrete floors, two restrooms, an executive office space, retractable 116" projection screen and a drive-up loading ramp for easy accessibility. Additional adjacent outdoor space is available for indoor/outdoor events.

It's the perfect blank slate for any event. See yourself here for your ultimate dream wedding.
